

Oct 9 Mini-Camp: Building & Paper Engineering

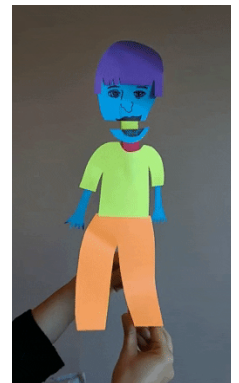

Campers will engage in building activities, explorations, and engineering projects designed to practice the skills of problem-solving, investigating through trial and error, multi-step processes, and collaboration – all in the target language.

Depending on the age group, campers will make simple machines while constructing a paper playground, a house or diorama project, work with paper and other tools, puppets with moving parts, and experiment with different construction materials and methods. If it's not too wet outside, we will gather materials in the park for collages.

Campers will of course play outdoor games and do other physical activities to get them moving and breathing fresh air! And as always, they will engage in language-building activities according to their level.

Key vocabulary in French, Spanish, and Mandarin includes building vocabulary, process language, sequencing language, language of collaboration, and vocabulary for the materials they use while making their projects.

Families receive a sheet with vocabulary and concepts campers engaged with.
